

Talking to Your Boss About a Leave of Absence for Rehab

Conversation Guide

---

Contents

Confidentiality &amp; Trust .....	3
Approaching The Topic With Your Boss .....	4
Proving the Effectiveness Of Rehab .....	4
Post-Rehabilitation Steps .....	5
Actionable Next Steps.....	6

Taking a leave of absence for rehab can be a difficult topic to approach with your boss or manager. However, it's essential to prioritize your well-being and recovery. This comprehensive guide will help you navigate the conversation with your employer while maintaining confidentiality and trust.

Confidentiality & Trust

---

Before initiating the conversation, remember that trust and confidentiality are crucial elements in any employee-employer relationship. Be prepared to discuss your situation honestly while respecting your employer's need for discretion.

- Research company policies – Understand your organization's policies on leaves of absence and addiction treatment. Familiarize yourself with any legal protections you may have, such as the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) or the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).
- Choose the right time and place – Request a private meeting with your manager to discuss your situation. Avoid discussing the matter in a public or open setting.
- Be honest and transparent – Openly share your reasons for seeking rehabilitation and explain how it will benefit both you and the organization.

Once you have an idea of how you are going to approach your manager, there are a few things to keep in mind for starting the conversation.

Approaching The Topic With Your Boss

---

When discussing your need for a leave of absence, consider the following:

- Address concerns – Your manager may have concerns about your ability to perform your duties effectively while you are away. Offer solutions such as temporary replacements or delegating tasks to colleagues.
- Discuss potential misunderstandings – Clarify any misconceptions about addiction and rehab, emphasizing that it is a medical condition requiring professional treatment.
- Highlight the benefits – Focus on the advantages of attending rehab, including improved productivity, reduced absenteeism, and increased job satisfaction.

During your conversation, your manager may ask for additional information about rehab. You can provide them with some information to help explain why it will benefit your future recovery.

Proving the Effectiveness Of Rehab

---

To demonstrate the value of the rehab program, consider the following:

- Provide documentation – Share relevant materials from the rehab facility, such as an overview of the program, treatment methods, and success rates.
- Discuss the duration – Clearly outline the expected length of your leave and any potential flexibility in the timeline.

- Outline post-rehab plans – Explain how you plan to maintain your recovery after completing the program, including support groups, therapy, or other ongoing treatments.

Addressing your manager's concerns about returning to work after rehab can go a long way toward gaining their support and understanding.

Post-Rehabilitation Steps

---

Once you have completed your rehabilitation program, take the following steps:

- Follow up with your manager – Schedule a meeting with your supervisor to discuss your progress and readiness to return to work.
- Create a return-to-work plan – Collaborate with your manager to develop a plan for re-integrating into your role, including any necessary accommodations.
- Stay connected with support systems – Continue attending support groups or therapy sessions to maintain your recovery and minimize the risk of relapse.

Your return-to-work plan should also include information on the company's substance use policies and how to seek help if needed.

By taking the time to discuss your situation honestly with your manager, you can ensure you receive the support and understanding you need for a successful recovery journey. With these tips in mind, you can approach this important conversation with confidence.

Actionable Next Steps

---

To ensure a smooth transition back to work, follow these steps:

- Communicate with your manager – Keep your supervisor informed of your progress and any changes in your expected return date.
- Prepare for your return – Before resuming your duties, review any updates or changes that occurred during your absence to ensure you are adequately prepared.
- Prioritize self-care – Establish a healthy work-life balance and continue focusing on your well-being.

By following this guide, you can confidently approach your boss or manager about taking a leave of absence for rehab and establish a supportive environment for your recovery journey.

Florida Helps

Recover With Purpose

FloridaHelps.com | (855) 810-0114
admissions@floridahelps.com

© 2025 Florida Helps